Movement for Engenle Marriage ImPersonal.

To the Editor of The Times-Dispatch:
Sir,—Will you let me correct the somewhat misleading implication of your article in this morning's paper, headed "Ministers Favor Marriage Law." The article contains the sentence: "In addition to getting the ministers in line Mr. Bowie has secured the co-operation of thirty-five representative physicians in the city." The chief mistake in that sentence is its personal reference. In the movement your article refers to 1 have been simply one of a group all alike interested, and not an individual possessing or assuming priority. Nor have 1, strictly sneaking, "secured the co-operation of thirty-five representative physicians." This promised co-operation has been enlisted by several interested physicians, who have brought the matter to the attention of their friends, and the thirty-five represent simply the number of those who happen to have been spoken to already. We hope to secure the co-operation of all the physicians.

Your reports of this whole subject of the proposed marriage restrictions have been in all their intent true and helpful, and the statements in to-day's article, which seem to me open to misconstruction, are simply inaccuractes of phrasing. But I ask that you print this correction in order to avoid the danger that this movement be made to seem linked in any special way with an individual and to stress the truth that it is the equal and impersonal interest of a large group.

Nature's Salute.

Many there are who often say
"it will rain on Memorial Day."
Yes, we are apt to have a big rain,
Clouds weeping for heroes shin.
Lightnings flash, thunders rattle,
Heminding us of some great battle;
Of heroes buried, without a grave,
Who spilt their blood their State to

Brave boys heard their country's call, Left their loved ones and their all: Left sisters, fathers and their mothers, Went to the front with their brothers. Sweethearts brushed away a tear. And bid their beaux a hearty cheer, Teiling them to be brave and true, "We and your country are watching you."

From loved ones forever gene.
